

Memorial Day would not be complete without the rain that seems to come on or about this time. This year was no exception with rain continuing for the next week or so with the lake level to rise to within a few feet of the pool level.

The dry sail boats were moved in mass to higher ground but very little water covered this area. Thanks to Tom, Jackie, Wade, John and the countless others volunteers who made this move in such a short time! The LCRA managed levels with the opening of multiple gates for a number of days and the club did not suffer any damage.

We have taken the opportunity with boats out of the dry sail area to do a much needed clean up with tree and brush clearing as well. A thanks goes to Molly and the great folks who contributed to the clean up challenge!

At this writing the launch ramps are open and most of the boats will be relocating back to their dry storage assigned spots.

The new walkways with roller design have worked well during the various stages of water going up as well as down. For most of us, we have never been able to have a level walk from parking area to ramp to dock! Awesome while it lasted! Thanks to Rand for completing this timely addition.

While it has been nice having the lake full...There are some predictions that we will see an especially hot summer with little rain like we experienced a short time ago. We will be adjusting the docks and plans accordingly.

The flooding has put some projects behind but we will update in more detail as we get more info.

Thanks again to all the members who stepped up in help with the cleanup and moving of boats in and out of the dry storage area!
